Cain is a cop show with a twist, a police procedural that focuses on the human behind the criminal. The show's hero—a cop in a wheelchair—is quicker and more mobile than most able-bodied people. Captain Fred Cain spins circles around his suspects, shows up when least expected, gets inside the darkest corners of the human mind... and uses his disability to break with convention (often) and the law (occasionally) without an ounce of shame or trepidation.

Seasons 4 and 5 ratings: Best seasons ever for Cain!

Cain has had a record season with great results both in quality and quantity:

a consolidated average of 4.5 million viewers for Season 4 despite sharing a timeslot with Koh-Lanta (Survivors), and a record of 4.0 million viewers on the first evening at 19.4%, close to the record high for that slot.

Season 5: consolidated average of 4.1 million viewers and 15.6% market share

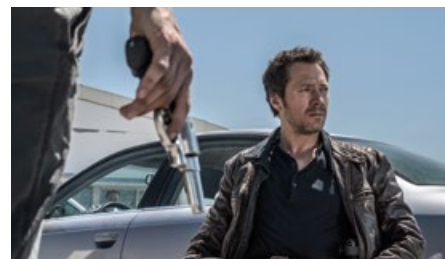

So the series is continuing its steady rise since its first season in 2012.
